THE GIFT OF SPRING

Spring arrived the other day
And called the sunbeams out to play.
She scattered showers on the earth
So barren soil could give a new birth.
She tiptoed through the flower beds
And gently kissed each sleepy head,
The flowers glistened in the sun
As colors bold she gave each one.
She chose for willows, chartreuse gowns,
And daffodils, bright golden crowns,
Then placed a robin in our tree
So he could sing for you and me.
Her magic wand she used with skill
Then scampered off across the hill.
Our Father God, to Thee we sing
Sweet praises for your gift of Spring.

PENNIES FOR PATIENTS – PENNY AUCTION!

Would you believe what the power of a penny is? Since it started, Pennies for Patients Day has raised $442,067.73! Fortunately, this has not all come as “pennies”. The year of the most pennies was 2002 when 13,000 pennies arrived. When bringing your pennies in, remember, we love silver and green paper pennies also! As we celebrate our 27th Annual PENNIES FOR PATIENTS™ DAY, let’s pass up last year’s total of $19,201.69. Come join us on Thursday, May 5, 2016 any time between 6:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m. so if you are an early bird or not, we have a time for you!

Come and see the excitement of thousands of pennies along with refreshments and fun. There will also be a Niles location on Main and 3rd Street from 12:00 – 2:00 p.m. with cookies and punch. All the proceeds stay local to help those with cancer in our community. Bring your pennies, silver, and dollars and join us for our 27th Annual PENNIES FOR PATIENTS DAY!

Are you a penny collector? We will be having an auction of 1,994 wheat back pennies and 6 silver pennies (total 2,000 pennies!). Our starting bid is $30.00, so beginning today, call in your bid to our office at 269-429-3281. The auction will end at 6:00 p.m. on Pennies for Patients Day.

What is psychological stress?

Psychological stress describes what people feel when they are under mental, physical, or emotional pressure. Although it is normal to experience some psychological stress from time to time, people who experience high levels of psychological stress or who experience it repeatedly over a long period of time may develop health problems (mental and/or physical).

Stress can be caused both by daily responsibilities and routine events, as well as by more unusual events, such as a trauma or illness in oneself or a close family member. When people feel that they are unable to manage or control changes caused by cancer or normal life activities, they are in distress. Distress has been increasingly recognized as a factor that can reduce the quality of life of cancer patients. There is even some evidence that extreme distress is associated with poorer clinical outcomes. Clinical guidelines are available to help doctors and nurses assess levels of distress and help patients manage it.

How does the body respond during stress?

The body responds to physical, mental, or emotional pressure by releasing stress hormones (such as epinephrine and norepinephrine) that increase blood pressure, speed heart rate, and raise blood sugar levels. These changes help a person act with greater strength and speed to escape a perceived threat.

Research has shown that people who experience intense and long-term (i.e. chronic) stress can have digestive problems, fertility problems, urinary problems, and weakened immune system. People who experience chronic stress are also more prone to viral infections such as the flu common cold and to have headaches, sleep trouble, depression, and anxiety.

How can people who have cancer learn to cope with psychological stress?

Emotional and social support can help patients learn to cope with psychological stress. Such support can reduce levels of depression, anxiety, and disease- and treatment-related symptoms among patients.

Some expert organizations recommend that all cancer patients be screened for distress early in the course of treatment. A number also recommend re-screening at critical points along the course of care. Health care providers can use a variety of screening tools, such as a distress scale or questionnaire, to gauge whether cancer patients need help managing their emotions or with other practical concerns. Patients who show moderate to severe distress are typically referred to appropriate resources, such as a clinical health psychologist, social worker, chaplain, or psychiatrist.

Can psychological stress cause cancer?

Although stress can cause a number of physical health problems, the evidence that it can cause cancer is weak. Some studies have indicated a link between various psychological factors and an increased risk of developing cancer, but others have not.

Apparent links between psychological stress and cancer could arise in several ways. For example, people under stress may develop certain behaviors, such as smoking, overeating, or drinking alcohol, which increase a person's risk for cancer. Or someone who has a relative with cancer may have a higher risk for cancer because of the stress induced by the family member's diagnosis.

Art Therapy for Cancer Patients

Focusing on painting is living only in the moment. It is actually telling the brain that we are engrossed in the present task at hand and not in worry/ anxiety. This way the mind receives only positive messages which in turn change the hormones & cells which are essential to one's recovery.

Thought for the day

Nobody has any right to find life uninteresting or unrewarding who sees within the sphere of his own activity a wrong he can help to remedy, or within himself an evil he can hope to overcome.
